Unit 2: Copyright Law

Assignment by Joy Kim

CC BY

Purpose of copyright

1. To encourage people to publish new works.
2. To protect the authors.

what is copyrightable and what is not

- Literary works
- Musical works
- Artistic works or works of visual art
- Dramatic works
- Cinematographic works (including audiovisual works)
- Translations, adaptations, arrangements of literary and artistic works
- Collections of literary and artistic works,
- Databases
- Computer software

How copyright works

Berne Convention 1886

1. Significant international agreement between WIPO(world intellectual property org), the WTO(world trade org) and private negotiations between countries on fair trade.

2. The agreement: all countries must give works protection within their borders w min standards--life term of author plus 50 years,

3. Territoriality- copyright is territorial and enforced through national laws.

National treatment- rule of non-discrimination; a country must grant foriegn authors same treatment as its own nationals.

PUBLIC DOMAIN

CC Zero- Creative Commons uses this legal tool to help authors put their works on the worldwide public domain.

Works in the PD may still be subject to copyright restriction in other countries.

Not legally required to attribute works to author, it is encouraged to still give credit to the original creator.

Some sites that host works in the public domain are Project Gutenberg, Public Domain Review, Digital Public Library of America, Wikimedia Commons, Internet Archive, Library of Congress, Flickr, Europeana, the Smithsonian, the Auckland Museum and the Rijksmuseum.[2]

Thank you.